August 2014

2014 Volume 3, Issue 3

WW II Weekend Aug. 16, 17 11—4

Venture out to Rose Hill Manor Park on Saturday, August 16, and Sunday, August 17, from 11 am – 4 pm each day to experience a WW II living history event which offers something engaging for all ages. Living historians, “soldiers” and civilians, will encamp for the weekend and invite visitors to come and enjoy visiting their displays exploring artifacts of the era. A home front constabulary (British bobby) will set up office; the Paper Dolls and sister group will portray life on the home front. Both infantry and airborne units will represent European and Pacific theaters of operation. A WWII Army switchboard and field phones communications center (with morse code) will be set up in the carriage museum. A mock up display will offer visitors the opportunity to be paratroopers and “jump” out of a plane. An Austrian Gebirgsjager might even be spotted.

WAR ON THE HOME FRONT

An adaptation of a play about American Girl Molly MacIntire, a girl growing up on the home front in 1944.

Saturday, Aug. 16 1—2 pm

NEW MUSEUM EXHIBIT

On Nov. 1, 1864, Maryland officially abolished slavery in the state—something that had not been accomplished by Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation which only freed slaves in states that were in rebellion. To acknowledge this 150th anniversary, vignettes and displays throughout the manor house focus on slavery in Maryland and even Rose Hill Manor. Guests are invited to meander through the museum and discover this aspect of history.

Making dipped candles was just one activity that has filled the park this summer. Young campers have learned about Peter Rabbit, explored Hogwart's magic, developed nature skills, practiced archery, visited history through the eyes of a slave girl, marched "to war," and discovered America's superheroes such as Jefferson and Washington. Future campers will visit "Seuss on the Loose" and Charlotte's Web.
